Satoko is a high school student. Last summer, she visited America to study English. She stayed with the King family. In the family, there were Mr. King, Mrs. King, and their child, Karen. She was fifteen years old.

One evening, Mrs. King said, "It's time for dinner. Everyone, come here!" When Satoko came to the table, she found something brown on a slice of bread. She said, "Oh, is this natto?" Karen answered, "Yes, you're right. We mix natto with jam and put it on a slice of bread." Satoko was surprised to hear that. Mrs. King said, "In America, Japanese foods are getting popular because they're good for health." Satoko said, "Yes, you're right. Natto is one of the healthy Japanese foods. My family eats it every morning, but ① we eat it in a different way. We usually mix it with soy sauce and put it on rice." She was glad to know they were interested in Japanese foods and she told them about some other Japanese foods. After dinner, Mr. King said to Satoko, "Karen said you like walking for your health. There's a beautiful mountain for walking near our city. Would you like to go there with us, Satoko?" Satoko said, "Yes, I'd love to. Thank you, Mr. King."

The next Saturday, the sky was clear and blue. There were no clouds. It was good weather for walking in the mountains. After a few hours' drive, the King family and Satoko got to the mountain. Mr. King said, "Satoko, we can sometimes see wild animals here." Satoko said, "I want to see some of them." They started walking. Satoko and Karen enjoyed talking and seeing beautiful flowers around them. Satoko said, "I've ② (beautiful these seen like never flowers)." Mrs. King said, "This mountain is also famous for wild flowers. Many people visit here to enjoy seeing them." She told Satoko about those flowers and Satoko took pictures of them. Then Mr. King said, "Look! There're two deer under that tree!" "Wow, Satoko, we're very lucky," Karen said. Satoko felt happy and said, "It's my first time to see wild deer!" They walked up and up. Satoko felt the sky closer to her. Karen said, "Now we're on the highest place. Look, Satoko. We can see our city in this direction." Satoko said, "Oh, I love the view from here! It's so beautiful! Thank you very much for taking me here." They had lunch there and enjoyed seeing the view. Satoko felt refreshed by  in the mountains under the clear blue sky.

After coming back to Japan, Satoko sent a book about Japanese foods. She wanted the King family to know more about them. Satoko got a letter from Karen. In the letter, she said, "Thank you for sending me the book. Now I can . I'll cook some of them for you when you visit us next time." Satoko hopes to visit the King family again.
