問題 A

Ryota : Good morning, Ms. Smith.

Ms. Smith: Good morning, Ryota. How are you today?

Ryota : I'm fine, thank you. And you?

Ms. Smith: Fine, thank you. It's a nice day.

Ryota : Yes. I ran in the park this morning. There were no clouds in the sky. I felt so good.

Ms. Smith: Oh, you ran?

Ryota : Yes. I'm in the soccer team and I want to be a good player. So I run every morning. I see some people who run in the park. When I say, "Good morning," to them, they also say, "Good morning," to me. It makes me happy.

Ms. Smith: I see. I also feel good when my students say, "Good morning, Ms. Smith," to me. Then, I ask them, "How are you?" It's a good way to start communication.

Ryota : I think so, too. Well, Ms. Smith, I'm going to London next month. I'll stay with a family there for two weeks.

Ms. Smith: Yes, you told me that. I hope you will enjoy your stay.

Ryota : Thank you. I know you're from London. So I have a question for you. When I talk to someone I don't know very well, what can I talk about?

Ms. Smith: Well, how about the weather? Some people in London say there're four seasons in a day because it often changes. We like to talk about it.

Ryota : Wow, I didn't know that.

Ms. Smith: And you like soccer, right? Why don't you talk about it, then? We have a lot of famous teams. Young people often talk about their favorite team.

Ryota : Oh, that's good. I sometimes watch their games on TV and I know some good players. I'll remember that. I hope I can play soccer with my new friends in London.

Ms. Smith: If you make a lot of friends there, your English will become better. Oh, we have to get off soon. Let's go, Ryota.
